"A Live Bunch From a Live Place" to Be Motto of Visitors.—Wear Natty Uniforms.

The caravan comes tomorrow.

Approximately 125 trippers from Kansas City, out on their annual June Goodfellowship tour, are scheduled to be in Maryville tomorrow night, arriving here at 6:15 o'clock, if bad roads do not delay them. They will make Maryville a night stop.

The Kansas Citians will be entertained by the Maryville Chamber of Commerce with a fried chicken dinner at the First Methodist Church, followed by a dance at the Country Club.

The caravan of about thirty motor cars will depart from the Union Station plaza in Kansas City at 7:00 o'clock tomorrow morning, for a 700-mile tour through Northwestern Missouri.

Bedecked in natty new uniforms—plaid knickers, blue and white hose, tan shirts, blue ties and blue and white caps—riding in motor cars fittingly decorated with banners and bunting, these Goodfellowship tourists will endeavor to exemplify "The Spirit of Kansas City" to farmers and business men. They will carry with them the good will of the city they represent and its Chamber of Commerce. The tour is sponsored by the Young Men's Department of the Chamber, under Lyle L. Fogel, vice-president, and Harry Crosbie, chairman of the Goodfellowship Committee. Through the medium of courteous salutations in the streets, in business houses and across the festive boards piled high with "country fried chicken"—and there is promise of much—the Kansas City delegation will meet their own Missouri folk.

Stops will be made in some forty cities and towns. Immediately upon arrival of the caravan, the occupants will "fall in" and stage a parade led by their own band, and augmented by stunts. Souvenirs will be distributed among school children amid a din of songs, cheers and yells. The trippers motto is "A Live Bunch from a Live Place."

At Burlinton 20 Minutes.

WANT PASTOR TO STAY HERE

M. E. CHURCH, SOUTH, ASKS MITCHELL'S RETURN.

PRESIDING ELDER HERE

The Rev. Robin Gould Conducts Fourth Quarterly Conference, Last of the Year.

At a meeting of the fourth quarterly conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South held last night, a unanimous vote was cast requesting the Presiding Elder, the Rev. Robin Gould, to send the Rev. and Mrs. R. A. Mitchell back to Maryville next year.

The Reverend Mr. Gould preached at the evening service and then conducted the conference, which was the last one for the year.

The Reverend Mr. Mitchell is now completing his third year as pastor of the church here. He has been very successful in his work. Last year a remodeling program for the church was started, and the church building is now equipped with a beautiful auditorium.

The church has grown under Mr. Mitchell's leadership, and it was the general opinion expressed at the conference last night that it would be a detriment to the church for him to be removed at this time.

Preached on "Twin Calves"

The Reverend Mr. Mitchell preached yesterday morning upon the theme, "Twin Calves," an appeal to his congregation to "play fair with the Lord," and for attention to the soul, equal to that given mind and body.

"In the frst charge that I served," said the minister, "one Sunday morning a layman came to me and said, 'I am in line for congratulations. We had twins come to our house last night.' I became very enthusiastic over the event and inquired after the welfare of the mother and the twins. He continued, 'Yes, I went out to the barn this morning and Old Bossy had presented me with twin calves.'

"This has since reminded me of a parable I once heard. A greatly prized cow one day presented its owner with twin calves. In the excitement over the event, the farmer rushed in to tell his wife and said, 'I am going to give one to the Lord.' He was a prominent member of the local church. It was hard for him to decide which one was to be given to the Lord. Three months afterward he was still undecided. Walking in the pasture one day after a severe electric storm, the farmer discovered that one of the calves had been struck by lightning. He went sadly to the house and told his wife that 'the Lord's calf is dead.'

"It is strange, the Reverend Mr. Mitchell pointed out, "the way the Lord's animals always get killed. I am body, mind and spirit. All the week I have abundance of opportunity for the cultivation of mind and recreation for the body. It is on Sunday that I may remember that I am not a machine toiling without rest.

"The seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. But so many people make it a day of labor in which the remnants of uncompleted tasks are finished. They make it a day for the playing of games. I have nothing against baseball: I like it and play it myself. But on the Sabbath I need something else. Nero fiddled while Rome burned. Fiddling is not wrong. But the salvaging of Rome was infin-

4 PROPOSALS ON OIL WELL

MEETING OF STOCKHOLDERS AGAIN IS CALLED.

MAY GIVE UP PROJECT

A Two-Third Vote to Be Demanded by Quitman Company—Outside Development Intimated.

Four propositions will be submitted to the stockholders of the Quitman Gas and Oil Company at a meeting to be held June 22. The matters are of such importance that a two-thirds vote will be necessary, and unless there is a two-thirds attendance the propect which has been carried on for some time will be abandoned.

Letters were sent out today by the board of directors under President Van Goslee's signature, calling the stockholders to a meeting at 8 p. m. Wednesday at the oil rig, nine and a quarter miles west of Maryville. In case of rain the meeting will be held the next day. Four alternative propositions to be submitted, the letters state, are:

1. Shoot the well at the 1337 foot depth.
2. Continue drilling in location No. 2.
3. Start a new well.
4. Abandon prospect.

The letters stated that "apparently the company has possibilities of obtaining a producing well on No. 2 location. The showing of oil in the 1337-foot sand causes some of the stockholders to want to shoot the well and take one chance in that sand. In case this fails others are desirous of drilling deeper in the same location; and others want to drill a new well."

These are questions the board of directors doesn't want to decide, the letter stated. At a stockholders meeting it is necessary for a two-thirds vote. "In case the two-thirds majority is not present the board will take it for granted the majority desires to quit," it continued.

The communication also stated that a foreign company will take over the leases and develop them further. The name of the foreign company has not been made public yet.

It was stated in the letters that the company will cease to exist July 31 unless certain taxes are paid to the "blue sky department" of the state, and it is vitally important that each stockholder be present at the meeting.

George Rose contracted to drill to a depth of 1400 feet in location No. 2, and last week was "swabbing" the well until all the water was bailed out. Operations ceased Friday and no further work has been done at the well.

Home of James Blagg Entered During Night

Trespasser Leaves Without Robbery As Lights Are Turned On by Members of Family.

Mr. and Mrs. James Blagg, northeast of Maryville, were awakened about 2 o'clock Sunday morning when they heard some one stirring about in the house. They saw the rays from a flash light, also. At first members of the family thought that a cousin, Marvin Allen, had come into the house, but the next morning they learned that he had not been there.

Nothing was taken from the house. Members of the family turned on the lights when they heard the noises and it is thought that they frightened the trespasser.

Mr. Blagg is a brother of Mrs. Fred Welling. The filling station on South Main street, owned by Mr. Welling was held up Friday night.

Another Sidewalk Ordinance Passed

Work Ordered Done On Property Owned By Clearmont Men.—Geo. H. Meek Reappointed Assessor.

Introduction of an ordinance to "force in" a sidewalk and the appointment of Geo. H. Meek as city assessor was the business of the city council in special session Saturday night.

The council adjourned until this Saturday for final passage of the sidewalk ordinance, which provides for the construction of a four-foot concrete walk on the north side of Thompson street, for one lot, from Dewey street west. The present sidewalk along this property, which is owned by Oscar I. Bancroft and Manning Rose of Clearmont, was condemned by the council, being declared unfit for use.

The ordinance provides that bids are to be received for this work at the city hall up to 7:30 p. m., July 6. The successful contractor will get a lien against the property for the construction of the walk. Advertisement for bids will start this week. It calls for 280 square feet of concrete.

"OLD FOLKS" HAVE A DAY

FIRST M. E. CHURCH HONORS ITS ELDER MEMBERS.

SERMON APPROPRIATE

"Paul The Aged" Is Pastor's Topic.—Had Four Looks, Backward, Outward, Upward and Forward.

"Old Folks Day" was observed Sunday morning at the First Methodist Church.

A bouquet of roses was presented to G. S. Woodhull, who was the oldest person present, being past 91. Mr. Woodhull is the father of the Rev. W. S. Woodhull, pastor of the church.

Mrs. J. W. Schroyer also was given roses for the longest membership in the Methodist Church. She united with the Church when she was 9 years old and has maintained her membership in some Methodist Church for seventy-six years.

Judge Ira K. Alderman was recognized as the oldest member of the local church. He joined the Maryville church under the pastorate of Daniel Hockett in 1866 when the church was still a preaching point on a circuit. He spoke of a great revival that took place under the Rev. C. H. Stocking

JUNGLE AND MYSTERY IN NEW STORY

Murder, an Ominous Tattooed Man, a Beautiful American Girl and a Great New Detective.

Through the streets of Porto Verde he stalked like the portent of evil. A tall, gaunt man, his face thin and shriveled as though by tropical fever; on his forehead three curious tattoed triangles; around his neck, even on those days when the fierce jungle heat left men gasping for breath, a chokingly high stiff collar.

Children ran as Prentiss passed. Men gave him a wide berth and glowered at him behind his back. The superstitious natives believed he had laid a curse on Porto Verde; they would have killed him had they not feared him too much.

He spoke to no one and slammed the door in the faces of those few who ventured to call at his gloomy fazenda. Toward Elise Marberry he harbored a deep emnity; once he set his dog on her, which was a murderous act in itself when you considered the giant beast's viciousness.

On this occasion Vilak saved Elise's life, at the risk of his own. Yet it was Vilak, of all people in Porto Verde, who refused to share in the popular hatred of the forbidding man who believed that Prentiss was more sinned against than sinning.

Prentiss is quite the most mysterious character in "Jungle Breath," the Democrat-Forum's new serial by Ben Lucien Burman. If Prentiss doesn't keep you guessing, then the story isn't written that will. "Jungle Breath" is a swift-moving, romantic adventure story. A mysterious murder plot, a beautiful American girl, a jungle setting and Vilak, a great new detective character.

It starts tomorrow in the Democrat-Forum. Don't miss it.

U. S. SUBMITS PLAN FOR MORE NAVAL LIMITATION

WOULD PUT CHECK ON CRUISERS, DESTROYERS, SUBMARINES.

THREE POWERS MEET

American, British And Japanese Representatives Gather For History Making Session.

Washington, June 20.—Differences between the American and British proposals for limiting naval craft presented to the Geneva three-power conference today are not serious enough to prevent agreement, according to administration circles here.

The basic American principal for a 5-5-3 ratio for the United States, Great Britain and Japan is apparently accepted by Great Britain, it is pointed out.

This government will probably accept the British proposal for limiting the size of submarines.

Washington, June 20.—The American delegation opened the tri-power naval conference at Geneva today by proposing a 5-5-3 ratio limitation of cruisers, destroyers and submarines for the United States, Great Britain and Japan.

The proposal was submitted in a formal memorandum, supplemented by a speech by Ambassador Hugh Gibson, chief of the delegation, of which both were made public by the State Department today.

After stating that the United States is willing to reduce as low as any figure acceptable to the other governments the American delegation proposes:

The Proposed Limits.

A total cruiser tonnage of 250,000 to 300,000 for the United States and Great Britain, and 150,000 to 180,000 tons for Japan, with 10,000 tons as a maximum per ship.

Destroyers—200,000 to 250,000 for United States and Great Britain and 120,000 to 150,000 for Japan.

Submarines—50,000 to 90,000 for the United States and Great Britain and 26,000 to 54,000 for Japan.

There would remain an "unrestricted class" which, though undefined, presumably would include mine layers and sweepers, submarine chasers and tenders.

As Great Britain now has a cruising strength of about 300,000 tons and the United States of about 100,000 tons, the plan would require a large American building program.

A Transitional Period.

The plan provides, however, for a transitional period during which the cruiser and destroyer tonnage limits would not be enforced. This would permit the United States to retain its present excess of destroyer tonnage until it catches up with British cruiser tonnage. No new ships would be scrapped.

It is understood that if the 300,000-180,000 cruiser tonnage total can be accepted, Great Britain can complete her present building program and then scrap about 58,000 tons of her obsolete cruisers and Japan about 40,000 tons. The United States it is understood, would have to scrap 62,093 tons of vessels of either cruiser or destroyer class and 80,000 additional tons in these classes upon completion of cruiser building.

After completion of present building programs if the suggested maximum limitations are accepted, the United States would scrap 3,868 tons of submarines and Great Britain and Japan none, it is understood.

Runs With Washington Treaty.

The proposed treaty would run with the Washington treaty, similarly limiting capital ships. The Washington treaty runs until 1936 and thereafter until two years following notice of abrogation by one party or until revision after one year's notice.

But the American Memorandum suggests the possibility of an additional clause for the revision in case either party considers its position jeopardized by "a change of circumstances," presumably if non-signatories, such as France and Italy, build excessively.

Three-Power Parley Is Watched Closely

Present Meeting of U. S., Japan and Great Britain May Decide Future of Disarmament.

Geneva, June 20.—With the meeting here today of President Coolidge's three-power naval conference, the fate of the whole future question of disarmament was hanging in the balance.

On the outcome of the present conference will depend almost exclusively the question of whether or not the League of Nations can continue with its plans for a general disarmament conference, covering not only naval, but land and aerial armanments as well.

The failure of the League's Preparatory Disarmament Commission to arrive at any definite ends last April was due largely to the inability of the leading naval powers to reach any agreement as to the method of naval disarmament; whether this should be by limiting total tonnage or by limiting each category of war craft.

As a consequence, adjournment of the League commission was taken until next November in order to allow the Coolidge conference to meet and try to solve the problem.

League May Follow.

In the event the United States, England and Japan are able to reach an agreement at the present conference on the matter of limiting their respective navies, it is regarded certain that this will enable an agreement at the November meeting of the League commission with the other naval powers on the subject. As the League has definitely linked up naval, military and aerial armaments into a single problem, progress with the two latter depends therefore upon a solution being reached on naval disarmament.

Only the United States, England and Japan were officially represented at the opening of the conference today. France definitely rejected President Coolidge's invitation to participate, owing to the fact that she considered the question already fully in the hands of the League of Nations.

Italy, however, who was also invited, reserved the right to send an official observer later, should the development of the conference indicate that she has interest in doing so.

Gibson Heads Delegation.

The American delegation, headed by Hugh Gibson, American Ambassador to Brussels, who has headed the American delegation to all of the League's disarmament discussions the past two years, comprised a long list of technical experts, including Admirals Jones and Long.

The English delegation was headed by Mr. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, while the Japanese delegation was in charge of Baron Saito, governor general of Corea, assisted by Vicount Ishii, former minister of foreign affairs, Mr. Sharbury, chief of the department of treaties, at Tokio, rear-admiral Kobayashi, and an unusually large staff of experts.

While the conference was summoned by President Coolidge for the purpose of endeavoring to give a further extension of the principles of Washington naval conference, namely the limitation of naval armaments by classes or categories, it is already certain that at least the original ratios adopted at the Washington conference will not be maintained for the auxiliary and lighter types of craft.

The Washington ratio for the larger types of warships was 5-5-3 for the United States, England and Japan and 1.75 for France and Italy.

To Consider Needs.

At the present conference not only the status quo of the present navies will be used as basis for establishing ratios for the different categories of ships but also the respective needs of each of the nations involved. England with her large foreign commerce to protect and her communications with her dominions will demand an entirely different line of treatment for certain categories than that for the United States and Japan whose naval problems are fundamentally different.

It is also expected that England will make definite proposals for limiting and reducing the size of various categories or warcraft. It is understood she will ask that the maximum size of heavy war ships be reduced from 35,000 to 20,000 tons; that the lighter cruisers be limited to 6,000 tons instead of 10,000 and that limit of 1,000 tons be placed on submarines.

It is understood that Japan also favors these limitations.

England also favors a program limiting the size of cannon on each category of war craft.

It is expected that the conference will last from one month to six weeks.

There was an item in the papers the other day about a man named John Pershing being on his way home from Europe. Doubtless the ship news reporters will find out who he is. . . . That's not to mention the terrible setback Mr. Lindbergh gave the Chaplin divorce trial, either. . . . The few American cities that haven't Chambers of Commerce to welcome Lindbergh certainly are in a hard way.

Parley Is Result of Coolidge Note

United States Took Initiative In Move To Reduce Naval Armaments.—Invitations in February.

Washington, June 20.—The Tri-Power Armament Limitation Conference, scheduled to convene at Geneva today with participation of United States, Great Britain and Japan, and observation of Italy, is held by virtue of a note issued by President Coolidge, February 10 of this year.

This note, addressed to British, French, Italian and Japanese Governments, inquired "whether they are disposed to empower their representatives at the forthcoming meeting of the preparatory commission of initiate negotiations looking toward an agreement providing for limitation in the classes of naval vessels not covered by the Washington Treaty."

In their replies, Great Britain and Japan accepted President Coolidge's suggestion, and France and Italy declined. Subsequently the Italian Government reserved the right to send observers to the conference.

The French rejection was based on the contention that the proposed conference might jeopardize success of the disarmament program being attempted under League Auspices at Geneva, and that the intention of the proposed conference was contrary to the French view that limitation of land, air and naval armaments cannot be undertaken separately.

Continues General Policy.

The initiative of the United States Government, in suggesting the conference was in continuance of the General Naval Policy laid down at the Washington Conference for the reduction of Naval Armaments, held from November 11, 1921, to February 6, 1927. That conference had stopped a threatened large-scale international competition in Naval Armament Construction, and had resulted in the establishment of the five-five-three Naval ratio between Great Britain, United States and Japan.

The established ratio was effective however, only in the case of capital ships, which were defined by treaty as (a) vessels of war, other than aircraft carriers, whose displacement exceeds 10,000 tons or which carry guns with a caliber exceeding 8 inches; and (b) aircraft carriers. There was no prescribed limitation on light cruisers, destroyers and submarines.

In the years since adoption of the Washington Treaty there has been more or less continuous political discussion as to whether the effects of capital ship limitation are being, or would in future be, seriously affected by competition in the construction of war vessels of the non-limited classes.

In the seventieth United States Congress, the majority believed the United States cruiser strength was inadequate, and a considerable construction program had been contemplated when the President's conference initiative was made. If the present conference should prove ineffectual, it is probable that the advocates of extensive cruiser construction would resume their program in Congress.

Present Strength.

Statistics submitted by the Navy Department to the House Naval Affairs Committee, as of October 1, 1926, listed modern first-line naval vessels of principal powers as follows:

Light cruisers—United States, ten, 75,000 tons; British Empire, forty, 194,200 tons; Japan, nineteen, 102,005 tons; France, three, 16,731; Italy, eight, 30,784 tons.

Destroyers—United States, two hundred and sexenty-six, 329,158 tons; British Empire, one hundred and eighty-seven, 335,885 tons; Japan, seventy-eight, 85,650 tons; France, twenty-four, 29,206 tons; Italy, twenty-eight, 33,000 tons.

Submarine—United States, fifty-six, 53,947 tons; British Empire, thirty-five, 36,500; Japan, forty-nine, 44,944 tons; France, twenty-two, 20,947 tons; Italy, nine, 7,167 tons.

In the months preceding the Geneva conference there has been only moderate interest in the United States and conflicting opinions have been expressed concerning the possible success of the conference in coming to a definite agreement.

An optimistic view expressed by the National Council for Prevention of War said:

"The hope in the situation lies in the economic necessity throughout the world for limiting naval expenditures, the conviction on the part of forward looking naval officers that the time is not far off when the forces of the air may make our present fleets practically obsolete, and the growing revolt of the minority everywhere against the aggressive use of navies to uphold national prestige and enforce imperialistic policies."

Negative views were based chiefly on the non-participation of France and Italy, which would complicate decisions by the other powers; and, from the American viewpoint, many experts held that the present cruisers strength is inadequate, making any important concession by the United States impossible.

Secret Consistory Is Held for 2 Cardinals

Ceremonial Is Carried Out In All its Medieval Splendor and Color.

By THOMAS B. MORGAN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Rome, June 20.—Pope Pius XI, garbed in a pure white cassock, with all the Cardinals in Rome attending, held a secret Consistory in the lavish Consistorial Hall in the Vatican Palaces.

Unbroken and refined by centuries of continuity, the ceremonial was carried out in all its medieval splendor and color.

His Holiness created two Cardinals, Monsignor Joseph Van Roey, Archbishop of Malines, and Monsignor Augustus Hlond, Archbishop of Posen. Cardinal Van Roey will be the successor of Cardinal Mercier, the famous Belgian war cardinal.

The Cardinals gathered in the Hall of Consistory accompanied by their secretaries. There was an array of Swiss Guards, papal gendarmerie and Palatine guards, while a number of distinguished guests were admitted only to witness the entrance and seating of the Holy Father on his throne. A bell rang and the master of ceremonies invited all those present to kneel, for it signified that the Pope was approaching, surrounded by his court and guard of honor, consisting of Swiss and Noble guards.

The Pope entered and blessed the assembly while walking slowly toward the thorne. He was seated and gave the sign that the proceedings were ready to begin. The Papal Majordomo, Monsginor Riccardo de Samper, then gave order for the "extra ones", which meant that all strangers must retire leaving the Holy Father alone with his cardinals.

The doors were closed as soon as all had withdrawn. The Pope then delivered an allocution. Immediately two papal messengers were dispatched to the homes of the new cardinals to convey the news. After the ceremony the Pope retired to his apartments.

"Zip" Perrin Tells of Arrival of Coolidges in South Dakota

By GEO. ("ZIP") PERRIN,
"Self Appointed Correspondent" for the Daily Democrat-Forum and Tribune.

Here They Come!

A crowd of 5000 persons rose to its toes, eager to catch a glimpse of the noted visitor, as the Presidential Special rolled into Rapid City.

Everything was in readiness to receive the President and Mrs. Coolidge. The large crowd was efficiently handled by the special traffic officers. Everyone was anxious to see Silent Cal and after the camera and moving picture men had arranged themselves in a rather formidable looking battery; and after the few little preliminaries were performed, the president made his appearance, along with Mrs. Coolidge. Both must have been well pleased at the hearty cheer that greeted them for both Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge seemed in the best of spirits despite the 1900 mile train trip.

After the Presidential Salute of twenty-one guns had been fired and considerable handshaking had taken place the President and First Lady were ushered to their waiting open car, which proceeded slowly through the cheering crowd, the President bowing to right and left as they proceeded. Mrs. Coolidge waved and smiled and seemed very happy. She carried a large bunch of American Beauty roses and was dressed in a simple frock of dark color.

When the car turned at the main street the President arose and acknowledged the storm of acclaim that greeted him from all sides. After reaching the outer edge of the city the open car was replaced by their special Lincoln sedan, and President and Mrs. Coolidge were off for the State Game lodge, 32 miles from Rapid City.

The business houses were all closed during the reception and people climbed to housetops, telegraph poles and any place of vantage to be found in order to better view the distinguished visitor. National Guardsmen and Regular Army troops ably held the crowd within the prescribed limits, while traffic officers handled the throngs at the intersections. Automobile traffic was entirely suspended all afternoon and until the President had passed.

You know, this fellow Cal, has a personality, and though pictured of a sombre nature, can put out a real smile when he feels like it, and he felt like it when he arrived in Rapid City.

PASTOR TALKS ON TWIN LAWS

TIME AND INCOME GIVEN TO GOD DISCUSSED BY MUSGRAVE.

TITHE IS FORGOTTEN

Minister Blames Failure to Teach Giving In Home and Church; Seventh Day Observation Is Universal.

"Briefly stated, God's Twin Laws, are that one-seventh of man's time and one-tenth of man's income belong to God," the Rev. R. E. Musgrave of the First Christian Church said yesterday. "Both have the same parentage; both are for man's benefit; both were reaffirmed in the Mosaic law; both were endorsed by our Saviour and the apostles; both were taught and observed for centuries after the beginning of the Christian era. One remains, while the other scarcely survived the Dark Ages. The principle of the one-seventh always was and still is universal. The entire civilized world keeps one day in seven. The principle of the one-tenth has been dropped largely if not entirely for the simple reason that it has not been taught either in the home or from the pulpit.

"In the Ancient world the tithe was universal, being observed by every nationality. It was a principle co-existant with man. "The tithe is the Lord's" Lev. 27:30, is a statement of fact, not a law. There is no hint anywhere in the Bible that the tithe was ever abolished. The tithe was a fundamental law. Christ abolished no fundamental law or laws. Christianity is not retrogressive. To pay less than the Jew paid under the Judahism would be going backwards and not forwards.

"Jesus endorsed tithing in a threefold manner. First by his rearing, second by his practice and third by his teaching. He was reared in a Jewish home. In his practice he paid the tithe else he would not have been a good Jew. Never was he accused of not paying the tithe. He was accused of many other things but never for failing to "render unto Caesar the things that were Caesar's and unto God the things that were God's." Six months before the last Passover (Luke 11:42) Jesus said, 'But woe unto you Pharisees! for ye tithe mint and rue and every herb, and pass over justice and the love of God: but these ought ye to have done and not to leave the other undone.'

"Six months later (Matt. 23:23) he said, 'Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye tithe mint and anise and cummin, and have left undone the weightier matters of the law, justice and mercy and faith: but these ye ought to have done, and not to have left the other undone.' These two references are the 'ye ought' of Jesus. Jesus not only taught tithing but went beyond it. To the rich young ruler he said, 'Sell all thou hast and give to the poor. . . .' His commendation of the widow and the two mites is one of the most beautiful appeals Jesus ever made.

"The blessings attending a tithing church are expressed in the following: 'Bring ye the whole tithe into the store-house, that there may be food in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith Jehovah of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.' Mal. 3: 10."

Curl-Canaday Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Mary Lois Curl, formerly of Maryville, to Mr. Guy Canaday of Albany took place Thursday, June 16, at Pratt, Kan. The following account of the wedding is taken from the Pratt Daily Tribune:

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at high noon today at the First Methodist Episcopal Church here when Miss Mary Lois Curl became the bride of Mr. Guy Canaday of Albany, Mo.

The church altar was beautifully decorated for the occasion with a profusion of roses and other spring flowers and greenery in wicker baskets.

Miss Orvileen Calbeck at the organ played "Meditation" by Morrison as the bridal party approached the altar, and continued playing softly during the reading of the ceremony which was performed by Dr. O. L. Curl, pastor of the church, and father of the bride.

The groom, who was attended by Mr. Harry Price of Maryville, Mo., met his bride at the altar. Mrs. Price, sister of the bride, attended her as matron of honor, and little Phyllis Jean Price, the bride's niece, carried the ring in a lily.

Following the ceremony and congratulations, members of the immediate family were entertained at a one o'clock luncheon in the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Canaday left this afternoon for Wichita from where they will go to Kansas City to visit with relatives. They will then go to Maryville, Mo., for a visit after which they will go to Albany for the summer.

Mrs. Canaday is a daughter of Dr. O. L. Curl, 203 North Jackson St., and in the short time that she has lived in Pratt has made many friends here. For a number of years before she came to this city, Mrs. Canaday made her home in Maryville, Mo. She is a graduate of the Missouri State Teachers College there.

Mr. Canaday is a son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Canaday of Stanberry, Mo. He too, is a graduate of the Missouri State Teachers College and will be superintendent of schools at Nishnabotna next year. Mrs. Canaday will teach English in the school there, also. Mr. and Mrs. Canaday will be at home to their friends there after the middle of August.

Those present at the wedding were: Dr. and Mrs. O. L. Curl, parents of the bride; Mr. and Mrs. William Curl, her brother and wife, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Price and daughter, Phyllis Jean, of Maryville, Mo.; Miss Eloise and Oliver Curl, Miss Orvileen Calbeck, Miss Grace Herr, Miss Eloise Leak, Mrs. K. Carl Utz and daughters, Mrs. A. E. Townsend, and Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Humphrey.

COMET RALLY FALLS SHORT

HOPKINS WINS SECOND VICTORY OVER MARYVILLE.

WILDNESS IS COSTLY

Lefty Lewis Performs Well Otherwise.—Kerns, St. Joseph, Effective for Winners.

A rally in the last inning, in which two Comets crossed the rubber, fell short one run of giving Maryville a win over Hopkins there yesterday. The Hopkins team made it the second victory over Maryville this year by a 4 to 3 score.

Hopkins used Kerns of St. Joseph on the mound and he struck out six Maryville men. He proved effective in the pinches, although he allowed seven hits. Lefty Lewis went the full route for Maryville, but proved to be wild in the first part of the game. Two bases on balls, coupled with two hits, brought in two runs for Hopkins in the second inning. Hits by Clark, Peve and Kerns and a base on balls to Baldwin resulted in scores by Clark and Baldwin in the third frame.

Maryville threatened in the sixth, getting one run, and had the bases jammed when the final out was made. Dowell struck out. D. Tobin got a hit. Tracy Lewis went to first on the pitcher's error and Search got a hit. Schultz struck out. Caywood was hit by a ball, but Brennan ended the Maryville half by going out Peve to Turner. Tobin getting the only score.

Brennan and Caywood scored the Maryville runs in the ninth.

Reynolds, Wilson and Beard umpired.

The next Comet game will be next Sunday on home grounds when the leader, Stanberry, will be entertained.

Hopkins will play at Tarkio tomorrow in a non-league game.

Bethany 0, at Gentry 3.

Albany 7, at Union Star 14.

First game, King City 5, at Stanberry 11; second game, King City 1, Stanberry 2.

Stanberry took a firmer hold on the lead in the Northwest Missouri baseball league yesterday by winning a double header over King City. The two victories gave Stanberry a clean bill of seven wins and no defeats.

Union Star continued to press Stanberry for the League leadership when it clouted out eleven hits and scored fourteen runs to defeat Albany, with seven runs and the same number of hits.

Hopkins is the only Nodaway County team that has a show to take the championship honors in the first half of the season, which ends July 10. Hopkins seems to be a jinx for the Maryville team and won on its home grounds, 4 to 3.

Gentry is the other team that remained in first division, when it shut out the Bethany team, now under the leadership of Babe Adams.

Francis M. Wilson Talks to Voters

Jefferson City, June 20.—Francis M. Wilson of Kansas City and Platte County is feeling the pulse of the rural democracy before definitely deciding to become a Democratic candidate for governor next year. "I may decide to become a candidate for governor, but at present I only am looking over the situation," Mr. Wilson said.

The tie for leadership in the Nodaway County League was broken yesterday and Barnard loomed as having one of the strong teams in the league. In a slugfest the Barnard stickers defeated Graham, 8 to 7.

With Pickering and Burlington Junction winning, three of the six teams went into a tie for second place each, with two games won and one lost. They are Burlington Junction, Pickering and Quitman. Quitman was forced from a tie for the league leadership by losing to Pickering, 8 to 2.

The Pickering-Quitman game proved much entertainment for the fans, and gave plenty of excitement, as Pickering bunched eighteen hits and Quitman annexed ten hits.

The line-ups:

Quitman: Bailey, ss; one hit, one error; McDonald, lf, one hit; Johnston, 1b one hit, one error; Laughlin, c, one hit; Johnston, 2 b, one hit, four errors; Hart, 3b, two hits, two errors; Stevens, cf, one hit; O'Riley, rf, one hit; Ashford, p, one hit, one error. Ashford struck out three men.

In the Barnard-Graham struggle, Barnard started out to put the game on ice in the first four innings, getting seven runs, and added the deciding tally in the sixth and put six men across the plate and another in the eighth, but the rally fell short. Summers, although touched for seventeen hits, struck out ten Barnard batters. Ham and Hubbel did mound duty for Barnard. Ham struck out four in six innings and allowed four hits; Hubbel struck out five in three innings and allowed one hit. Summers issued three passes and so did Ham.

The Cost? What Do You Mean?

A story is told of a customer who asked a dealer where his profits came from, if it were true, as the dealer had stated, that he sold his watches below cost. "Profits" replied the dealer, "why I make my profits out of repairing them."

The J. C. Penney Company do not wish to make any "repair" profits. They feel that goods which are not serviceable are expensive at any price and all merchandise is bought on the principle, "It is not what it co[st] the service it wi[ll] that determines its value." They like to feel that their name stands for both Quality and Low Prices but Quality first of all.

Twenty-five years ago, in a wind-swept mountain town, a humble country store, the firstborn of the large Penney group, set the high standards which have always been maintained. Our motto is not cheaper prices but more value at a price. Our buyers measure the cost of an article by its durability We hope you will too.

CHAPTER 60.

When Clay Curtis returned to the Curtis mansion, he found a very white, very sick old man in bed, guarded by an anxiously frowning physician.

"Your father wants to see you, Clay, but I must warn you to be careful of what you say to him. He is suffering from shock, and he hasn't been a well man for over a year. He needs his son, Clay," the doctor added in a low voice as he detained Clay outside his father's door.

"Hello, son," T. Q. called feebly from his bed when the haggard-faced boy entered. "Did you find her? But you wouldn't be back so soon if you hadn't," he added hopefully.

"No, Dad, I didn't find her," Clay answered gently. "I found that— Romaine's car overturned in the dirt road leading to the cabin. Romaine is dead."

"And Billy?"

"I found her handkerchief under the car. She had undoubtedly been with him. But she couldn't have been hurt badly in the accident, for she had taken her suitcase with her. Romaine's bag was under the car. I found her footprints in the mud—" His voice choked.

"Clay, I knew you'd find me if you wanted me enough."

"And you obliterated them?" T. Q. asked almost sharply.

"Certainly. Billy musn't be connected with this in any way. No one in the world can prove that she was with him at the time. It is an unfrequented road, leading only to Romaine's cabin. I left him there, Dad. It seemed best for someone else to discover his body. Tradespeople will be going to the cabin tomorrow or the next day, undoubtedly, since Romaine kept a Hindu servant there. I walked up to the house and peered into the windows. I saw a black-skinned native eating some foreign mess, but no evidence that Billy had taken refuge there. She hardly would, you know."

"I'm glad he's dead," T. Q. said slowly, closing his eyes for a moment. Then, "And you couldn't find her, son?"

"No, Dad. She simply disappeared off the face of the earth apparently. I drove madly up and down the main highway, but there wasn't a soul on foot. She probably accepted an offer of a pick-up by some passing car, and God knows where she is now."

"She won't come back to Colfax," T. Q. sighed with profound weariness. "But we must try to find her, son. You're right, Clay. I tried to play God with the lives of three beautiful girls and I—played devil instead."

He closed his eyes and a gray shadow settled on his thin old face. To Clay it seemed like the shadow of approaching death.

"Listen, Dad, I'm sorry I spoke as I did." He dropped to his knees beside the bed and took one of his father's limp hands in his. "It has all been my fault as much as yours. I was selfish. I thought only of myself, winning my own freedom, making you proud of your 'self-made' son—"

"You were right, Clay," his father interrupted on a great, shuddering sigh. "I have been proud of you this year. I acted like a weak fool—couldn't endure a little loneliness while my son made good on his own—"

"Let's not talk about it any more, Dad," Clay begged. "Of course I'm coming home now, if you want me—"

"Want you?" the old man trembled.

"Why son—"

"And if you'll let me bring Billy's mother here to live. She's been my mother for a year, and we can't leave her to loneliness and poverty, now that Billy has gone."

"Billy won't desert her mother—won't let her starve," T. Q. defended the absent girl loyally. "That's how we'll find Billy, Clay. She'll send money to her mother as soon as she's earning anything."

"I can't wait for that, Dad," Clay protested, rising to his feet. "I'm going to look for her until I find her. I imagine she had some money with her—a little at least—"

"And she was wearing an eight hundred-dollar moleskin coat," T. Q. contributed hopefully. "Of course we can't advertise for her. We must give out to the papers that she has gone to New York to study music. Everyone knows that damned year is about finished."

"She'll go to New York, of course," Clay went on. "I'm going to have to spend a lot of my time there anyway, marketing my songs and getting my symphony produced. I'll not rest until I find her. What about Winnie, Dad?" he asked suddenly.

"Warburton was here just after you left. He made her write a complete confession as to hers and Romaine's schemes, and sign it. She can't bother us with blackmail, if she's ever tempted to do such a thing, which is unlikely. I had Warburton give her a check for a thousand dollars, which she seemed pathetically grateful for. She's gone home to her father and tomorrow she'll remove him to a sanitarium in the mountains. There won't be any scandal—thank God—for your sake—" Tears clotted his feeble voice.

"There, Dad. I'll have to go now and tell Mrs. Wells that Billy has left suddenly for New York to continue her studies. God knows how I'll make her believe it—"

"You won't, son," T. Q. said wisely. "She's a smart woman. Tell her I'll be proud and grateful to have her make her home with—us."

"On still one more condition, Dad," Clay persisted, with a stubborn set to his jaw. "I'm going to pay our share of the expenses of the home—Mrs. Wells' and mine. It won't be easy at first, but I'll have a lot of money coming in soon. And since we'll all want to live a simple life, we can do on about half the servants you now have. Good night, Dad. We'll both be over tomorrow and then—off to New York for me. I'm going to find Billy."

But finding Billy Wells did not prove to be the simple thing that Clay had hoped and prayed it would be. Three weeks after her tragic flight into the night, a short letter with two hundred dollars in bank notes came from New York to Mrs. Wells, addressed to the Poplar street house. There was no clew as to the writer's address, no explanation of how the money had been obtained, but T. Q. knew that Billy had sold her fur coat. After that the short, reassuring letters came regularly, once a week, each with its pitiful enclosures of a folded five-dollar bank note. After two months the weekly enclosure became seven dollars, instead of five; within three months there was a ten-dollar bill in each weekly envelope. The letters themselves contained only general reassurances and pathetically reiterated messages of love for the mother she had so neglected for a year.

Mrs. Wells wept over the letters and sent them to Clay, who was spending most of his time in New York. After failing to trace her himself, he hired a private detective to aid him in the search, but months went by without bringing a ray of hope to the distracted young man who was rapidly becoming a figure of importance in New York's musical circles.

Nyda Lomax Banning, whom Clay encountered on the street one day nearly a year after Billy's disappearance, gave Clay the first real new reason for hope.

Clay hardly recognized the over-painted, over-dressed woman who came to his table in a night club. Clay sat alone, waiting to hear a girl violinist play in the hope that it might be his lost sweetheart.

Nyda gushed over him and settled herself at his table. Clay made no effort to conceal his distaste for her society, but Nyda, homesickness lurking in the languorous depths of her black eyes, held him in conversation.

"Sure, I ditched Eddie long ago. I was in the chorus of 'Naughty, Naughty!' for two months, then a big butter-and-egg man convinced me that work was bad for my health. So I'm taking things easy," she added nonchalantly. "And say, by the way, I thought Billy Wells was the blue-eyed baby, so far as old T. Q. was concerned. What's she doing in New York, wearing last year's clothes and looking like a starving Armenian?"

Clay leaned forward so abruptly that he overturned his own untouched drink. "Where did you see her?" he demanded, his voice trembling with eagerness.

"Walking along Broadway one night with a fiddle case in her hands," Nyda answered. "For God's sake, don't shout at me! That's all I know! I was with my boy friend and I didn't speak to her."

No matter how desperately he pounded his questions at her, Clay could get no more out of Nyda. But he did leave the night club that night with hope burning high in his heart. If Nyda had seen Billy on Broadway, when she wasn't even looking for her, couldn't he who loved her so well and who was devoting more than half of his waking hours to looking for her hope to meet her, too?

"Blessed, plucky little angel!" he exulted. "I knew she was studying again. Working all day and studying at night. She's been to take a music lesson, of course! God bless her!"

When his symphony, "The Song of Toil," was presented to the public for the first time by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra—an event which had been lavishly heralded in the press—Clay stood in the lobby of the concert hall from the time the doors opened until they were closed for the night, scanning every face in the great throng that entered. But Billy was not in the audience. His greatest hope had failed. If she loved him at all, or if she still cared for his success, wouldn't she have been there? But—what if she didn't have the money for a ticket? He groaned aloud in misery, which had only been temporarily alleviated by the deafening salvos of applause that greeted what the press later was unanimous in praising as "the greatest American symphony."

Then one night, when his bags had been checked at the Penn station and he was walking the streets until time to catch the train to Colfax for one of his brief visits to his father and Mrs. Wells, the miracle happened. He was walking, heedless of his surroundings, along Ninth Avenue, when above the roar of passing elevated trains he heard the high, sweet, perfectly pitched tones of a violin.

He stopped as suddenly as if he had been shot. No, he was not dreaming, he told himself dazedly. The lilting, joyous but somehow sad melody of a song that he had never published, because it belonged only to Billy Wells, came winging its way from an upper window of the four-story rooming house before which he was standing.

"To an Autumn Dryad" was being played as not even its composer had ever hoped to hear it played.

"The greatest violinist in the world!" he gasped, as he sprang up the dark, steep stairs, almost upsetting a dirty child that scuttled resentfully out of his way.

One each landing he paused, listening, then plunged on until he had reached the top floor. His hand was about to close upon the door-knob without knocking when the violinist stopped abruptly in the middle of one of the closing passages of music.

"Haven't I told you not to break off in the middle of a bar like that?" he shouted, as he flung open the door and looked, for the first time in nearly a year, upon the slight, boyish little figure that he loved better than anything in the world.

She lifted her head, which she had bowed disconsolately upon her violin, and stared at him with wide, startled eyes, which slowly filled with such luminous joy as Clay had never seen in human eyes before.

"Clay! I knew you'd find me—if you wanted me enough!" she cried, dropping her cheap little violin to the floor and holding out her arms to him.

"Want you? Billy! I've been looking for you day and night for a solid year! Oh, darling, say you love me! And then I'm going to ask you for the fourth time to marry me."

"I love you!" she said solemnly, and raised her thin little white face for his kiss. "I wanted it to be a year before you found me," she said brokenly. "I wanted a year to regain my self-respect, to prove myself a—a—genius—as you did. And now I want you, Clay. We've earned each other—now."

THE END.

WHY MOTHERS GET GRAY

Burlington Junction

(By J. Howard Thompson).

The Rev. J. Howard Thompson came home Friday from the summer school being held at Cameron, for the week-end and to conduct his service Sunday morning. During a business session of the Board of Education, for the Missouri Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, he was elected registrar for the conference for another year. He returned to Cameron Sunday afternoon to complete his work at the school, which will close Thursday.

We were mighty sorry to have been a little slow with our semi-weekly letter to the Democrat-Forum last week, but we were on the jump too much to do much writing. Here was our program: In Barnard on Sunday afternoon for a funeral; in Ridgeway Monday morning to christen the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Chilton; in St. Joseph Tuesday that I might give attention to some necessary business matters, and then at Cameron Tuesday night where I attended the summer school the balance of the week.

Dr. C. C. James, who is so well and favorably known in Maryville, now district superintendent of the Cameron district of the Methodist Church, was elected Dean of the summer school for the next year. He has held that office for several consecutive years. Dr. James recently finished a four and a half year pastorate of the First Methodist Church in Maryville, relinquishing the pastorate to take the position of district superintendent of the Cameron district with headquarters in Cameron. The Methodist Church in Maryville was rebuilt under his direction while he was its pastor. The other officers of the summer school were re-elected. They are the Rev. E. P. Reed of St. Joseph, president of the board, and L. Earl Snider, vice-president.

Highway No. 18 now seems an assured fact, through or near Burlington Junction. The County Court went on record last week Saturday to purchase the right-of-way, and contractors have been on the field looking over the projects to be completed in the near future. A grade is to be built across the river bottom, with a minimum height of four feet and a maximum height of eight feet. This will obviate any further trouble with traffic, during the bad weather season.

Mr. and Mrs. James Greenelsh are entertaining their son, Alfred, from San Louis, Obispo, Cal. He was a delegate to a recent Kiwanis convention, held in Memphis, Tenn., and came this way on his return home to visit his parents for a few days. While here he and his mother visited friends in Clarinda.

The Depot restaurant has again changed hands. Walter Horn, who has owned it for the past few months, sold it last week to Silas Manley, of near Clearmont, who give in exchange for it farm property. Mr. and Mrs. Horn are now on the farm near Clearmont and Mr. and Mrs. Manley are in the restaurant.

Burlington can report another wedding. This time the contracting parties are Herbert Carpenter, of Elmo, and Miss Mary Hutson, of Burlington Junction. They were made man and wife by Judge Jesse F. Robertson. Their many friends here will wish them happiness in their married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Merle Brittain, are the glad parents of a baby girl, born to them on Friday morning, June 17. This is the second child and only daughter. They having christened the child Mary Jeane.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Church will meet Tuesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Houston, one mile northeast of town. All members and friends of the Society are urged to be present at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of that day.

Quite a delegation from this community attended the auto races at Shenandoah last Wednesday. Among those attending we noticed the names of the following living west of town: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Daugherty, Bessie and Buford Daugherty, brother and sister of Fred, Roosevelt, Nort and George Van Meter. All report having had a fine time.

Mrs. Phil Corken was a recent hostess to the Hagey 4-H Club of that community. This is a sewing Society among the ladies of that neighborhood, and after a few minutes given to the business of the Society, sewing and garment making were given attention. At the conclusion of the afternoon's work refreshments, consisting of ice cream, cake and lemonade were served. The following members of the club were present: Vera and Esther Walker, Orba and Majorie Merrett, Helen Mae, and Phylis Corken, Dorothy Dalby, Mildred Jones, Mary Frances Greeley, Vera Hedrich and Pauline, Ruth and Ruby Sloan.

Next Sunday night is to be one of the really big events at the Methodist Church here in town. Miss Alma Corken of St. Joseph, a reader of unusual ability, will be present and have charge of the major part of the evenings program. The Misses Helen, Arnold, Mildred Charlene Williams and Iola Graves will give short readings as a preliminary to the evenings program. The service will begin at 8 o'clock.

Henry Rutherford, salesman for the Woods Thresher Company, will soon go to Fargo, No. Dak., in the interest of his company, and will remain there until late in the Autumn. He was in Red Oak and Creston last week.

The Rev. E. N. Garrett, a former pastor of the Methodist Church in Burlington Junction, but now of Lathrop, is a member of the faculty of the summer school in Cameron and also on the Board of Education.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Willson, who have been here from Seattle, Wash., for the past few weeks, visiting friends and relatives, went to Albany last Saturday to visit friends for a day or two. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Beavans. They will return to Burlington Junction before going on to St. Louis, and Chicago, where they will visit for a time before returning to their western home.

The excessive rains of last week delayed Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones and their family on their getting started to California. Their sale which was to have been held on Saturday, June 11, was not held until Tuesday, June 14. They completed their arrangements, however, and got started on their long journey, in their auto Thursday noon of last week, going that afternoon to Savannah, where they remained over night with friends, leaving for California, by way of Oklahoma City Friday.

The Rev. Diabold Isadore, who has been pastor of the Catholic church here for the past two years or more, and who has done very efficient work among his flock, has been transferred to a large and more important church in Springfield, Mo., and will take up his work in the new field Sunday morning, July 3. During his pastorate here, Mr. Isadore has made many friends. He was not only popular with his own people but with the general public.

Pickering Revival Is Given Good Start

The tent revival meeting at the Pickering Methodist Church, under the leadership of Evangelist Herbert C. Hankins got a good start yesterday. The day was fair and many people "turned out" from the town and vicinity. Those composing the party are Prof. Frank Washburn, Mrs. Hankins, Miss Dorothy Hankins and Miss Elizabeth Hankins.

Mrs. Hankins sang two solos. Special music will be one of the features of the meetings. Evangelist Hankins gave stirring messages.

The Christian Church voted to suspend its Sunday evening services during the revival meetings. The pastor of the Christian Church and a good number of his congregation were present at the Sunday evening service. "The outlook is for a great meeting," says the Rev. H. A. Doughty, pastor.

Beginning tomorrow morning, there will be preaching services at 9 o'clock every morning up to and including Friday. Preaching every night at 8 o'clock. A big day is planned for next Sunday. A Sunday School rally will be held at 10 a. m., followed by sermon by the evangelist at 11 a. m. There will be a basket dinner after morning service, and at 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. the evangelist will preach.

Surbiton, Surrey, June 20.—The old formula for the marriage service has at least one supporter. He is Lord Hugh Cecil, member of the British Privy Council.

Speaking on the revised prayer-book here, Cecil confessed to a liking for the word "obey" in the marriage service.

"I am all for the old marriage vow," he said. "I am not very likely to get married, but if I did I would insist on the old service."

Who Uses Oil?

Who uses oil? Everybody! The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) supplies products of petroleum used—directly or indirectly—by every one of the 30 million people of the Middle West.

The two major products of oil—gasoline and lubricating oil—are essential to motor transportation, to industry and to commerce.

In addition to the major products of petroleum there are hundreds of by-products which fill a great variety of needs and, by eliminating waste, help to make possible the low price of the major products. The man who rides over an asphalt road—the woman who oils her sewing machine—is using a product of petroleum.

The wheels that are busily whirring in factories throughout the land, manufacturing the necessities and luxuries of life, must be lubricated.

Oil plays its part in the manufacture and distribution of practically all the products in use today—the food we eat—the clothes we wear—the houses in which we live.

As a nation we move on oil. Wheels on our railroads—cars—trucks—are lubricated by the products of petroleum.

Engines—in millions of automobiles, trucks and tractors—are fed the products of oil.

In manufacturing petroleum, products for the people of the Middle West, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is helping to unite the nation, socially and industrially.

The passenger miles done last year by automobiles has been estimated at 240 billion.

That means travel. Motorists learning to know their own country. People from one section visiting other sections. An interchange of people in the ten states of the Middle West. Horizons widened—sympathies broadened—the fabric of our national life more closely knit together.

Industrially the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is helping to unite the nation. Gasoline and oil bring the city to the country and the country to the city.

At the end of 1926 there were 4,850,000 farmer-owned automobiles registered. In addition there were the motor trucks which bring the farm close to the markets, benefiting farmer, merchant and general consumer.

Providing petroleum products for the people of the Middle West is a big job made up of countless small ones—each of which must be performed with the same accuracy and whole-hearted effort. The energy and time of 29,000 men and women, united by a common loyalty and enthusiasm, are required to carry on the work of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana).

Conscious of the greatness of the task, yet mindful of the importance of every detail, this great army of workers is daily putting into action the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) creed of service.

LABOR RAINED OUT IN KANSAS WHEAT FIELDS

Men And Boys From All States Find Disappointment—Expected To Migrate North.

Wichita, Kan., June 20.—Grimy, denim clad men and boys, drawn to this area from every state in the Union by the dure of harvest money, so far have found only disappointment and have been amusing themselves with a turtle-like migration along country roads.

Fan-like, the roaming army has spread over the wheat country along the highways. Walking, riding in broken down automobiles and begging rides from passing motorists, they have scoured the countryside, but work is scarce.

The harvest has been delayed by weeks of rain, and the footsore wanderers have been forced to live on scanty rations and to sleep where they can, mostly under the open sky.

If the rains continue, the harvest will be delayed further.

Railroad officials accustomed to estimate the labor needs, say the exodus will begin soon and the harvest hands will seek more fertile fields.

Closing Grain Review.

Chicago, June 20.—Wheat was unsettled and nervous within a range of 1 to 2 cents on the Chicago board of trade, with prices generally holding well above the previous close. Liverpool was strong, ⅜ to 1 cent higher, and weather and crop news was unfavorable.

Some points in Kansas had heavy rains, with the Kansas City market strong in consequence and showers were pretty general through Canada, out Northwest, West and as far south as Kansas. The cash market was steady to 1 cent higher.

Corn met with considerable selling the greater part of the session, and prices averaged lower. The cash demand was moderate, with prices 1 cent lower.

Oats were easy at the start and did not show much strength at any time, although there was a little commission house buying. The cash market was unchanged.

Provisions were lower and without feature.

and wondered if there were any left in the city who were converted in that meeting.

The Dorcas Class and the Men's Class aided in bringing the older members to the service.

The Reverend Mr. Woodhull preached on the subject, "Paul, the Aged." "To Paul the aged," the pastor said, "came four looks. The Backward Look down the way he had followed since he persecuted the Church brought back to him in shame the memory of his sin. 'I am Chief of sinners,' he cried, 'and not fit to be called an Apostle, for I persecuted the Church.' But he saw the Cross, too, in this backward look. And he always remembered with deep humility and sure faith that Jesus 'bore our sins in his own body on the Tree.' Nor was he forgetful of his long labor of love. Paul's frank speech concerning his achievements in a lesser man would have been boastfulness. But he had a right to boast. He had done something worth remembering.

Depend More Upon Cross.

"So all aged folks who have lived for God will be mindful of their sins and all the more that they can see the growth of evil seed into still more evil harvest. They will depend on the mystery of the atoning cross more and more as they discover the vicariousness of all life. And if they have lived worthily they may be easily excused if they tell again and again the story of their accomplishments through His grace.

"But the Apostle also held the Outward Look. He came to know many men and women in his long and various pilgrimage. And there grew up between Paul and these a strong bond of comradeship in the Way and in the work. All whom he knew were different, one from the others. And all had their virtues and their faults. So the Apostle became more considerate and mellow in his judgments as he grew older. He who contended sharply with Barnabas because his nephew, John Mark, had flinched a bit at the first testing in his age, could dismiss from the record the deserter Demas with the simple words 'And Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world.'

"Those who grow old wisely, as they remember the comrades of the long road through the years and their virtues and faults will become more generous in their judgments and more ready to give another the benefit of the doubt before they condemn him.

"The third look that was given the aged Apostle was the Upward Look. He was always keenly conscious of God. As others might live in an atmosphere of money or of power or of pleasure, he lived and had his very being in God. 'For me to live is Christ.' 'Whether I eat or whether I drink or whatsoever I do, I do it all in the name of the Lord Jesus.'

"To all the aged there comes a constantly increasing sense of the reality and the nearness of the Heavenly Father. Other supports fall away as the years advance and they must lean more and more on Him. Someone has said 'The Devil has no happy old men.' But God makes those who are old happy in Him.

Death But A Beginning.

"The Forward Look became more and more notable in the later letters of Paul until that shout of victory and farewell burst from his lips 'The time of my departure is at hand—Henceforth there is laid up for me the crown.' He saw just ahead the glory of his Coronation Day. To the young, death may seem a terrible ending to God's old it is a blessed beginning. As they look forward, 'Earth recedes; Heaven opens!

"Age may seem to be the very hush of life when men wait in the twilight for the coming of the dark sleep. Rather to the thoughtful old, it must be a time of profoundest readjustment. Their interest in earthly affairs is that of a by-stander; their personal concern is with the things of Heaven. They no longer count the broken years of time; they are computing the eternities. Those who move around grow dim, for their eyes are being focused on those dear faces which they have loved long since and lost awhile. The finding time is near. They plan no more tasks for this world but they wonder more and more about the glorious work that waits them in the endless life.

"As mysterious winds whisper the wonder of the coming dawn, so their souls are thrilled by the breath of eternal ambitions. As in childhood they adjusted themselves to the wonderful life that then lay before them now they are readjusting their thought and their outlook to the still greater wonders of the endless life. As the worker draws to the door of the noisy factory and as the child leans to his leap from the threshold of the grey schoolroom so those whose faces are towards liberty after the fetters of life's duties are eager to run out into God's eternal out-of-doors."

The Reverend Mr. Woodhull, concluding, quoted from Mathie Babcock:

"This is the death of death, to breathe away a breath
And know the end of strife and taste the deathless life,
And joy without a fear and smile without a tear
And work, nor care to rest, and find the last the best."

itely more important. There is nothing wrong with clean sport, but it appears to me that there is a human soul that needs care and the one day in seven should be devoted to that need.

Sees a Lack of Honor.

"I am afraid there is less honor in some folks' religion than in anything else in which the participate. Everybody loves the football hero. He denies himself that he may give the best to the team. He would not cheat and bring dishonor to his Alma Mater. There is honor in football. There is honor in business. A man will not break his business engagement or agreement. But when it comes to some folks' relation with the church, ogligations are broken and little thought of it. 'I could not go, it rained.' Yet the rain does not keep them from other places. 'I had a chance to go somewhere with friends.' The house of the Lord is ignored. 'I had a slight headache.' At other times they would take an aspirin tablet and go ahead and forget all about the headache. In the making of the family budget if there is any item cut it is always 'the Lord's calf' that loses a leg or is killed outright.

"In days of old, the Jew was commanded to give a tenth of his profits and a seventh of his time. Contrasting his performance of religious duties, it makes us ask the question, 'Am I a decent Jew?'

"At the call to worship and prayer from the minaret, the Turk never hesitates to prostrate himself on the ground at least seven times a day. Professing Christians who are seemingly deaf to the call of Sabbath worship cause us to ask frequently, 'Am I a decent Turk?'

"Neither the Jew nor the Turk have the spiritual inducements drawing them to the practice of their religious beliefs that the Christian has.

"Jesus claims to be the Master of our lives, but He does not rule us as a tyrant. When there was nothing in us to love at all, He loved us. 'He has not dealt with us according to our sins, nor rewarded us according to our iniquities.' While we were yet sinners, Christ died for us and this great love manifested toward us should not go unheeded, unrewarded."

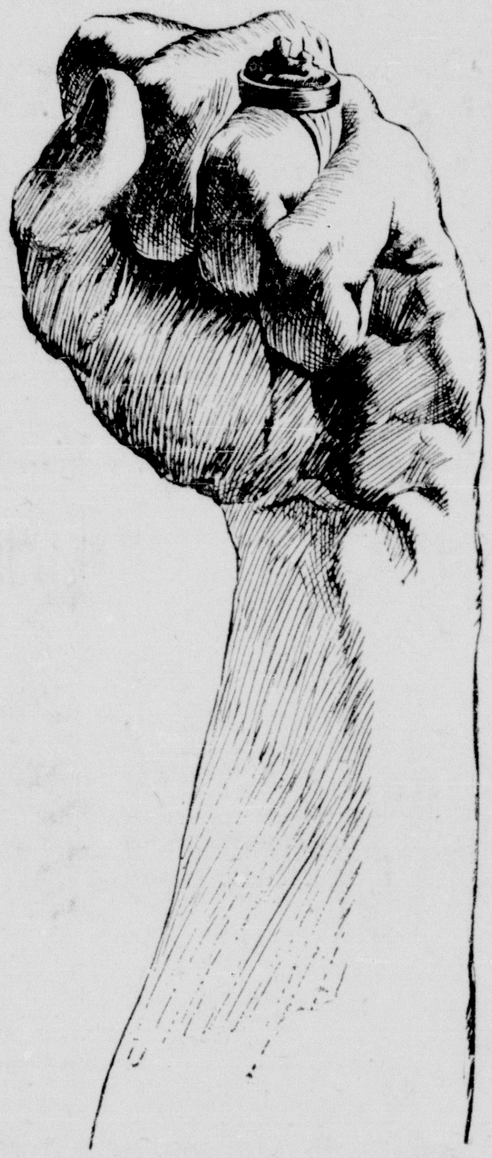
A Story for Every Member of the Famliy Starting in

The Democrat-Forum and Tribune TOMORROW

JUNE 21st

Start reading this intensely interesting story with the first installment.



The Ring of Death

A grewsome ornament, mystifying, deadly. At its touch men fell in an agonizing paralysis and died. No one knew its origin. Only a few knew its terrible secret. It was one of the baffling mysteries of Porto Verde.

Porto Verde, a jungle-fringed town in South America, where Elise Marberry, a girl from the United States, encountered the enmity of a plotting band of cutthroats, a murderous gang to whom killing was as casual a performance as eating or sleeping.

A man named Vilak saved her and solved the mystery of the ring. A strange man, but shrewd and courageous. Not since Sherlock Holmes has fiction produced a greater detective character. Not in years has a more entertaining adventure story been written than the story that introduces him—"Jungle Breath," by Ben Lucien Burman.

"Jungle Breath" is a story for every member of the family. Clean, wholesome, red-blooded adventure. Romance. Mystery.

Remember—starting in this paper tomorrow.
